State Law Cell Phone Use & Emergency Vehicles

State law regarding cell phone use while driving provides an exception to police officers operating an authorized emergency vehicle, but Chief Frese believes "the police must recognize the potential to increase our own safety and that of the public while demonstrating respect for and understanding of the spirit of the law. A fact worth all of our attention is that overall vehicle fatalities have decreased 22% since the enactment of the law." This is why she is advising Greenfield officers to use hands-free/blue tooth type devices when they find cellular telephone communication is necessary while operating a police vehicle.
